

ARI SOUTH
V

Born and raised in Waianae Valley, Hawai'i's own - Ari South grew up on a small farm run by her parents, both Laotian immigrant farmers. During her senior year in high school, she attended a college fair where she was introduced to fashion design. It sparked an interest, to say the least, and before long Ari enrolled at Honolulu Community College to pursue her dream. Graduating in 2007 with an Associate in Applied Science, she went right to work in clothing manufacturing. Seeing that she indeed had a gift, Ari's colleagues urged her to audition for the hit TV series, Project Runway. She wowed both the judges and the American TV audience, as she placed third in this world-renowned competition. Ari has since been invited back to Project Runway All-Stars and continues to be a fan favorite. As one of Hawai'i's premier designers, her intention through her creative process is to honor her Asian roots as well as her love for Hawai'i. In her collection, you will see beautiful prints incorporating native Hawaiian elements - including the like, maile lei and the pala'a fern.

ʻIOLANI

Founded in 1953, by Edith and Keiji Kawakami, 'IOLANI has been at the forefront of Island fashion for over 6 decades. Three generations and a myriad of changes later we see the 'IOLANI legacy of creating quality, while balancing history and innovation, continues. It is this legacy that inspired 2nd generation, Lloyd and his sons, Nick and Alex, to fuse fashion and music with their band ManoaDNA. In 2010 they transformed part of their factory on Kona Street to a retail space and in 2017 they created the 'IOLANI Center. When you visit the new 'IOLANI Center you'll begin to understand how this family company continues to grow, honoring their "made in Hawaii" roots and the legacy that inspires them still.
